Mt. Hood theater group loses two key volunteers

Thursday, April 20, 2006

The Mt. Hood Repertory Theatre Company is losing two of its key volunteers. Trish Egan, assistant artistic director, and Harold Phillips, operations manager, have resigned their volunteer positions with the company to broaden their professional acting careers. Phillips and Egan are married.

"We're needing to simplify a little bit," Phillips said. "But, of course, we're still going to support The Rep and serve in the advisory capacity for the board, if they need us."

The couple started with the Repertory Theatre Company in 2002, as volunteers and actors.

"While we are saddened to lose their professional theater expertise, we can't help but be thrilled over their successes in the Portland theatrical community as well as in Metro-area television advertising," said Tobias Andersen, artistic director.

"Both Trish and Harold will be missed for the many off-stage responsibilities they handled for the company," said Karen Caton, co-president.

Phillips was instrumental in the theater group's summer student intern program, as well as handling all aspects of the company's operations. Jan Macdonald, theater director from Reynolds Middle School, has stepped in to take on some of Phillip's operational responsibilities.

OUR AFFILIATES

The production process is underway for the 10th anniversary American Classics Theatre Festival, and volunteers are needed to assist with administrative tasks. The theater group has recovered from an earlier setback of having the production rights for "On Golden Pond" denied due to it's revival on Broadway. New plays have been selected, and the formal announcement will be made in late April.
