Separated At Birth: Portland Actor Harold Phillips and Steve Carell

by RobertWagner on June 21, 2009

Portland area actor extraordinaire Harold Phillips is a bit of a tough call. The first time I saw Harold, he was starring in a pretty cool interactive web movie called The Outbreak (which sadly was so successful that they can't afford to let you see it anymore). Throughout the feature, which I watched (played?) about 30 times, Harold reminded me of the love child of Scott Bakula and Stephen Baldwin. Later on I saw Harold in another film (sorry, I can't recall the name of it) and he seemed a bit older – a bit like Harrison Ford in The Fugitive. Then I run into this promo shot for yet another Haroldfilm and I can't help but think what The Office COULD have been like.

By the way, Harold's tweets should be required reading for anyone studying psychology. How one seemingly normal man can be so... weird... is beyond me.

Ummm. ok... don't recognize any of the titles.

Walter Ate a Peanut (2009) Brother in law
The Bicyclists (2009) Girl's Father
The Outbreak (2008) (VG) James
Sum of the Parts (2008) Jules Krieg
Secret Identity Crisis (2007) Innocent Bystander #1
The Answer to Absolutely Everything (2007) (V) Proposing Man
Dark Horizon (2007) Officer Warren
How to Breathe (2007) Bill Collector

Abso-frickin-lutely the point my friend. No one, and I mean NO ONE, plays a better "Innocent Bystander #1" than Harold.
